IRA STOUT'S PAREWELL TO HIS MOTHER.

Below we publish a letter sent by Ira Stout to his mother. A tone of feeling pervades it that should indicate the writer as a truly penitent man. If Ira is such a one, he is sadly belied; if not, he is one of the most impudent hypocrites alive. It will be seen that the letter is dated Tuesday evening, Oct. 12—the evening previous to Ira's abortive attempt to commit suicide—and it was probably written with the expectation on his part that he would be a corpse by his own act before another day had fairly [From the Rochester Democrat and American.] by his own act before another day had fairly dawned. With this preface we print the letter:

Tuesday Evening, Oct. 15.

My Beloved Mother: If I knew a name higher and holier, it should be yours. Receive my kindest and most affectionate farewell in this world, which has indeed been a troubled one to us. You have gained some things, nother, but lost your son. Don't imagine that I blame you, because I do not. I deeply pity others that things should be in a position so unhappy; but, as for me, I am content. I would be pleased to live, mother, for your sake and others not mine; but, in the face of all I have suffered and would have to pass through, even if my life were spared, will you ask me to live? I know what human promise is; I know what human resolution can do. I am willing to display all the regard and affectionate judgment I possess in deciding these things, but in doing this I am driven irre-sistably to death sistably to death.

In my younger days, mother, you did all a good mother could do to make me great and good. My first thought of God and goodness I learned from you, and the first prayer I ever said, you taught me. My attachment to books and knowledge I owe to you; and my qualities that may redeem my character are the result of your teaching. All my badness and perversion should rest on father and myself. My beloved mother, how good and eminent I might have been, had I done as you taught me. It is my last regret that I die without making any return for all you have done for me; but there is no hope or prospect of accomplishing this left me, mother. You will not mourn too much over it, mother; we must all lie down alike in the dust. And what matters it, whether we die in the prime and glory of youth, or the weakness of age? Where shall my grave be, mother? Let be where you and Charlie and Franky can vist it. But you have another son, mother, the noblest and the best. Our happy Charlie-than whom a better son and brother never adorned the earth-will remind you of the one you have lost. The hopes wrecked in me may be realized in him. He has all the power of your tall son, without his terrible experience and unfortunate

And now, mother, you will listen to me more than others. Let me say, on the authority of that immortal book called the Bible, there is a better and a brighter world, where peace and happiness reign eternally. By sincere prayer and repentance, a true faith in Christ, a pure and holy life, this world of deathless beauty and perfection may be attained. Though you have lived, mother, an upright, Christian life, yet with a deeper feeling and a purer interest, be-lieve more strong the inspired truths of the Bible, and live nearer the Saviour of the world. This simple belief and prayer will be your sup port and consolation under all troubles, and cheer the bed of death with a hope of happy immortality. And when long years have rolled, nother, and you have passed from earth, may you reach that world of love and light, and enjo that peace and contentment which you have not found on earth. Receive the visits and counsels of our learned Christian friends, Mr. Bloss, and others, who are among God's best and pures children on earth. In my last writing I have exonerated you and Charlie from any connection in this terrible affair, and also stated other exposition as matters of defence, judgment and

And now, mother, fare well! As my first looks of love and hope were turned to you, so take my latest love and blessing.

"And if there be some happier sphere,

Where fadeless truth, like ours, is dear, If there be any land of rest

For those who love and ne'er forget, Ar-Oh, Mother mine, all safe and blest, We'll meet in that calm region yet." I am yours in death, as in life, mother,

MARION IRA STOUT.

FALL OR SPRING PLANTING OF TREES .- Mr. oughry, who is one of the oldest and most intelligent fruit growers in southern Ohio, does not approve of full planting as a general rule; because in very severe winters, trees are more liable to suffer injury after recent removal, but he prefers to procure his trees in the fall, especially if they are to come from a distance, and heel them in deeply in dry mellow soil, where they will remain safely until spring, and be rendy for planting whenever the ground is in right condition. He also prepares his land in the fall, plowing deeply as possible, then digging the holes wide and deep, leaving theur open through the winter for the frost and rain to mel-low and fertilize the soil. This is especially ad-Wirginias Ledge No. 3.-Mests everyThursday vantageous where the subsoil is of a clayey or erening at the Hall, corner of Market and Quincy streets compact nature, as is the case in most parts of Ohio .- Ohio Cultivator.
